

Abstract

A method, of selectively establishing read-only access to a volume of a storage-device, may include: receiving an input/output request packet (IRP) that is traversing a stack of device objects representing a storage-device; determining the type of access being requested via the IRP; and selectively failing the IRP depending upon the requested-type of access.